

Seems like the precedent for paid broadcasting has been set by cable television, or do they want to take that away, too? Clear Channel and the other conglomerates have ruined land-based radio; no doubt it is hugely frustrating for them to be unable to monopolize satellite radio. This is not a legitimate reason, however, to punish the satellite broadcasters and deprive me of my right to choose.

If I want to pay a subscription fee to receive a superior product that is my right.
